Essar Oil Ltd, owned by Russian firm Rosneft and partners, today said it plans to change its corporate identity to Nayara Energy Ltd.

Rosneft and its partners completed the $12.9-billion acquisition of Essar Oil last August, entering the world's fastest-growing Indian energy market.

“Essar Oil Ltd (EOL) is seeking approval to change its corporate identity to Nayara Energy Ltd. The new corporate identity for EOL is in line with the company's strategy to create a new brand and identity, reflecting the new ownership and its ethos,” the company said in a statement. Rosneft owns 49.13 per cent of the company, while global commodity trading and logistics giant, Trafigura and Russia's UCP Investment Group own another 49.13 per cent.

EOL operates a 20-million-tonne-a-year refinery at Vadinar in Gujarat and 4,473 petrol pumps. The new owners of Essar Oil aim to scale up the company's petrol pump network to 6,000 outlets. The rebranding “will enable positioning the company to compete and succeed in the new era and meet customer needs in the fastest growing energy market in the world”, the statement said.

In a message to employees, CEO B Anand said Nayara “signifies the company's vision to succeed in a new era in the energy sector”. Anand told employees that they would hear more on the brand, identity, brand promise and ethos in the weeks to come.

Essar Oil has said it was seeking approval to change its corporate identity to Nayara Energy. The new identity is in line with the company's strategy to create a new brand, reflecting the new ownership and its ethos, Essar Oil said on Thursday. "It will enable positioning the company to compete and succeed in the new era and meet customer needs in the fastest-growing energy market in the world," Essar Oil said. The majority stake in Essar Oil was acquired by Rosneft and a consortium led by Trafigura and UCP in August 2017.

Essar Oil said the term coined from "Naya" (new) and "Era" strongly signifies its vision to succeed in the Indian and global energy markets. The adoption of the new name is subject to all requisite approvals.

Rosneft, the new owners of the company after the Russia-promoted Essar group exited, is the world's largest publicly-traded petroleum firm. Trafigura is one of the world's leading commodity trading and logistic companies. UCP Investment Group is one of the largest financial investment groups in Russia.

Analysts said the consortium might have chosen a new name instead of using Rosneft as there were multiple stakeholders in the company.

As of April, Essar Oil operated 4,473 retail outlets in the country. So far, Rosneft has operated these outlets under the 'Essar' brand. It is not clear whether the company will rebrand its retail outlets to reflect the new name. The fuel retailing segment in India is dominated by state-run oil marketing companies (OMCs). With the market size in terms of outlets reaching a saturation point, Essar Oil will have to battle with the state-run OMCs, and Reliance Industries and Shell in the private-owned fuel retail space.

In October 2016, Rosneft and a consortium led by Trafigura entered into a deal with the Essar group to acquire Essar Oil's refining and retail assets for $10.9 billion and also acquire Vadinar port and related infrastructure for another $2 billion.

The new name, coined from 'Naya' (new) and 'Era', strongly signifies the company's progressive vision to succeed in the dynamic Indian and global energy markets, the company said in a statement.

In a message to employees, CEO B Anand said, "With the backing of our new shareholders, we are confident of steering the company to a new era."

The company's 12-member board is headed by chairman and non-executive director Tony Fountain, who worked with BP and Reliance Industries in the past. It includes senior representatives from the investors, senior management and independent directors.

Essar Oil's incumbent CEO Lalit Gupta had stepped down from the position but continues as a senior advisor to the board of the new company. B Anand is the CEO now. He was chief financial officer Trafigura India and has worked with the Future Group and Vedanta Resources before that.
